“Where do I even begin? Babcia has been my constant for 34 1/2 years. In so many ways I truly believed she would be around forever and she got closer than most by walking this earth for nearly 98 years.

Babcia was my absolute #1 fan and spoiled me more than I want to admit. When I didn't want to sleep alone as a little girl, I slept with Babcia. I never went a day growing up without an amazing polish meal ready for me whenever hunger struck (or when I caved after the 12th time of her asking if I was hungry). She was hands down the best cook in the world and if you tell me you've tasted better golabki (stuffed cabbage) than hers I will laugh in your face. Whatever I wanted, she didn't see why I shouldn't have it. If that's not the world's best grandma, what is?

She was one of the strongest and strong-willed women I knew. I remember when she was about 80 she was out chopping wood in the yard, hurt her arm & proceeded to make a makeshift sling out of fabric she had around the house and that was that. Who needs doctors? She thought a shot of vodka was a valid medicinal substitute. Her joints could predict the weather. She was in this country for 40+ years and managed to do JUST fine only ever knowing a few key phrases/words in English. We joked she was “strong like bull” but truer words have never been spoken.

I am beyond grateful she was there to see me graduate from college and get married even though she was in a lot of pain for the latter and had to make cross country treks to do both. She was able to meet & love & spoil my daughter and even though she never had a chance to meet my son, I know she loved him immensely in the 12 short weeks their lives overlapped.

I could go on but I'm sure at this point I'm just writing this for myself so I will end by saying ja kocham ciebie Babcia. You have always been and will always be a part of me and I will miss you for the rest of my days.

“ Jozefa Zarkowska was the matriarch of our family. Tough as nails, hard working, loving, a great cook, always there to give a hug, lend an ear and up for a gossip session. Babcia was our rock, our home and the heart and soul of our lives. You will be missed so very much.
